

Domestic Abuse Program

Lee Carlson Center's Domestic Abuse Program (DAP) takes a person-centered approach that shows group members how to be accountable for abusive behaviors while also holding space for them to learn about trauma, respect, and empathy. The awareness and insight into past trauma allows members to move through feelings of shame, which leads to accountability and healing. All groups are open and ongoing and adding new participants all the time.

DAP members attend
20 weekly 2-hour sessions (or more as indicated by probation or court order)
